Great Buying Opportunity for Shares of Liberator Medical Holdings (OTCBB:LBMH)

By Paul Silver

One year ago, shares of Liberator Medical Holdings, Inc. (LBMH:OB) were trading around the $0.40-$0.50 per share range. And then something happened. Between July and October 2009, following the announcement of the Company's second fiscal quarter 2009, the stock started running from the $0.50 range to as high as $2.47. The catalyst for this price move was the market's broad recognition of Liberator's strong and consistent quarter-over-quarter revenue growth and positive net income. This is not to say that Liberator began reporting stellar growth in July 2009. In fact, the market was extremely late to the table.

During 2008, during the first, second, third, and fourth fiscal quarters, the Company consistently reported triple digit revenue growth (quarter-over-quarter) of 102%, 117%, 215%, and 942% respectively! During 2009, during the first, second, third, and fourth fiscal quarters, the Company reported 282%, 309%, 184%, and 78% revenue growth, quarter-over-quarter. Based on the timing, it appears that investors needed six consecutive quarters of triple digit revenue growth to embrace Liberator's potential and drive the stock to a more full valuation. Readers should also bear in mind that this growth was occurring during one of the worst recessions this country has ever faced.

Since March 2010, shares of Liberator have lost much of their momentum, pulling back to earth to the $1.40-$1.50 level where they are currently trading, representing a 40%+ pullback from 52 week highs. We ask the same question again: What has changed? Have stock market investors been panicky after a strong rebound during the latter half of 2009? Absolutely. Are we heading into a double dip recession? Who knows? Have Liberator's solid operating fundamentals that propelled the stock over the last year gone sour? The answer is a resounding no. First, the second fiscal quarter (ending on March 31, 2010) is the most challenging for Liberator each year due to the annual renewal of its customers' insurance coverage, primarily Medicare Part B coverage, and calendar year deductibles that must be met by the majority of its customers at the beginning of each calendar year.

Despite these second fiscal quarter challenges, sales growth for the first and second quarters of 2010 was 68% and 66% respectively, certainly not disappointing results; and both quarters were profitable. One of the perceived shortfalls during the second fiscal quarter was net income, $256,000 compared to $854,000 in the first fiscal quarter. Part of the reason for this comparative shortfall was an investment in new infrastructure. In January 2010, Liberator completed the build out of an additional 24,000 square foot facility to house an expanding workforce to support future growth.

Liberator chose to invest in recruiting, hiring, and training additional staff ahead of its advertising schedule, which helps the Company achieve compliance on many fronts and maintain customer service quality, but causes the Company to incur costs before corresponding revenues have a chance to ramp up. During the first six months of fiscal year 2010, Liberator added eighty-one employees. Costs are recognized and accounted for immediately, but sales ramp up over a longer time period.

In addition, effective December 2009, Liberator, modified its employee benefits plan to cover 100% of its employees' portion of their health insurance plan, which resulted in an increase in health insurance costs during the second quarter and reduced earnings, however the Company expects that the increased health insurance costs to be offset by improved employee turnover rates, improved customer service, reduced training costs, and improved efficiency.

In summary, a Company that is building out its infrastructure to support additional sales growth and granting employees 100% health care coverage does not sound like a company that is bracing for deteriorating business fundamentals. On a trailing P/E basis, shares of Liberator appear fairly valued at 22.3x. However, forward P/E is far superior metric given the Company's consistently stellar revenue growth rate, but since 2011 estimates are unpublished, this figure is unavailable. On a PEG ratio, if we were to take the trailing P/E of 22.3x and use the average of the two last previous fiscal quarters of EPS growth (121% and 147%) as a proxy for annual EPS growth (2008 net income was negative, hence no annual growth rate available), the PEG ratio would be approximately 0.17.

Finally, of the 39.2 million shares outstanding, there is only 16.78 million in the float and Mark Libratoro, CEO owns just under 50% of the common shares. In summary, it is our opinion that investors will soon wake up again and find value in shares of LBMH, driving the stock to new highs. For the speculative or aggressive investor looking for strong upside potential combined with strong fundamentals and a proven management team in a recession proof industry, there is no better play than LBMH.

JUNE'S TOP COMPANIES UNDER $5.00 AS MEASURED BY INSIDER BUYING:

Investors and analysts look to the buying and selling trends of insiders, who are typically long-term investors, for clues to the broader market outlook. According to Ben Silverman, InsiderScore.com's director of research, "Insiders have been very accurate in terms of calling market bottoms, both temporary, in terms of corrections, and troughs."

Although insider buying is a useful tool to consider when making a decision on which stock to buy, it should be looked at carefully lest it give a false positive signal. Investors need to look behind the headlines and conduct their own research before buying on this basis. For example, option exercises can also give false signals.

This section summarizes the companies (trading under $5.00 per share) with the greatest amount of purchasing by insiders during the previous month.
